ISLA VISTA, Calif. (KABC) -- The suspected gunman in the Isla Vista rampage killed three people at his apartment before he allegedly went on a shooting spree in the college beach town, the Santa Barbara County Sheriff's Department said Saturday.

Seven people were killed, including the suspect, identified as 22-year-old Elliot Rodger, and 13 others were wounded, four by the suspect's vehicle.

Of the six victims, three unidentified males were found stabbed to death in Rodger's apartment. Three other people were shot and killed.

The apartment was one of several crime scenes identified by the sheriff's department.

The shooting began outside the Alpha Phi sorority house, where 22-year-old Katherine Cooper and 19-year-old Veronika Weiss were killed. Another woman was left with multiple gunshot wounds.

Authorities said Rodger then went to a nearby deli, where he shot and killed 20-year-old
